“ Louise and I taught at PS 156 in the Bronx for many years. We became very good friends. We took our travel sabbaticals together and had many unusual adventures. We stayed in a friend's flat in Blackheath outside of London. It was fall and the heat and hot water left a lot to be desired. We were wishing for good old American plumbing. This was a luxury flat. I Have a bunch of friends in London and we visited them and even managed to cook dinner for them in the flat. Our friend drove us to Cornwall where we were using Eagan Ronays Good Pub Guide. Louise was focusing on Stonehenge and anywhere the French Lieutenants woman stood including a very windy pier where we almost fell off. Life was fun. Louise had a great sense of adventure. She loved to travel and learn about new ideas and new places.
We made many other trips.
She was a caring friend who left us too soon.
Fondly

“ I am so sorry that I can not come to the funeral service for Louise. I was her good friend, probably her best friend, for most of our lifetimes. We travelled together throughout Europe, often rented vacation homes together, and each shared the joys of small dog ownership. The morning and evening walks served as reviews of our teaching days and planning opportunities for our future journeys. Louise was a kind and loving person who was intensely loyal to friends and family. She remained intellectually committed for her whole life, joining book discussion groups, wanting to discuss challenging literary passages. Her commitment to the Museum of Natural History lasted for years as she taught origami to children who then decorated the Museum annual Christmas tree. Louise survived the tragic death of her son and, after many years, the passing of her life companion, Carlos. She faced it all with strength and courage. I will always, always miss her.
